

Cysts

Cysts are sac-like and are usually filled with fluid, which may be blood, clear fluid, or pus. A cyst can be normal, abnormal, or, in rare cases, cancerous. In some cases, a cyst may be drained either with a needle or by cutting it open, or it may be removed entirely.