The Fraser Valley Centre: part of a provincial organization...

The BC Cancer Agency's Fraser Valley Centre opened in 1995 to bring cancer care closer to home for those who live in communities from Delta, along the Fraser River, to Hope.

The Fraser Valley Centre is one of four regional centres operated by the BC Cancer Agency. The others are located in Vancouver, Kelowna and Victoria. Together they deliver cancer treatment based on provincial standards and guidelines established by the Agency. Those consistent guidelines have led to some of the most favourable cancer outcomes in the country.

The BC Cancer Agency is committed to translating knowledge derived from basic research into clinical practice as quickly as possible for the benefit of cancer patients. The Fraser Valley Centre helps the Agency achieve its research goals through its community-based clinical trials and interdisciplinary research activities.
